Both Liza and I wish to dedicate this bibliography to the small towns of Kamsack and Fillmore in which we grew up. The experience of growing up in rural Saskatchewan is something that never leaves the soul.

Index IN-1

Introduction

In honour of the 100^{th} anniversary of the Province of Saskatchewan, the Saskatchewan Legislative Library has compiled this bibliography of all the local histories that are part of the vast collection of the Legislative Library. The index of community names located at the back of the volume has been created to provide a helpful tool to locate all the local histories for a particular community in the bibliography.

Over the years the Legislative Library has tried to obtain a copy of every Saskatchewan local history that has been published. Today the collection stands at over 900 titles ranging from a rare book title, History of Regina, published in 1887, to titles published in the centennial year, 2005. The people of Saskatchewan have not only written histories about towns and cities, but also histories of municipalities, school districts, churches, and various ethnic and religious groups. Truly, the rich variety of local histories in our collection is a testament to the industry and proud history of the many peoples who make up our province, Saskatchewan.

Of course new books are being published all the time and as we become aware of new titles they are ordered. If anyone knows of a local history that has not been included in this publication please contact the Library Reference Desk at (306) 787-2276 and we will pursue ordering it for our library.

What is a local history?

When I think about what we consider a local history publication at the Legislative Library the word that occurs to me is 'community'. A local history is the story of a community, and in many cases, though not all, the writing of a local history is a communal effort. For example, in the history called Turtleford Treasures, the Turtleford History Book Committee has a page-long list of acknowledgements for the people who worked together to produce their history book.

Inclusion/Exclusion Criteria

Saskatchewan Local Histories at the Legislative Library includes local histories of cities, towns, villages, churches, school districts, rural municipalities, First Nations communities, and a few Hutterite colonies. The criterion for selection was to include all entries from the library catalogue that fell within the Saskatchewan local history Dewey decimal call number range 971.24 - 971.244.

It is important to note that there are many different types of Saskatchewan history materials that have not been included in this bibliography. For example, titles about Saskatchewan as a whole such as The Encyclopedia of Saskatchewan are not referenced. Likewise, histories of associations such as Beyond the Range: a History of the Saskatchewan Stock Growers Association, or The Assiniboia Club, 1882-1982: 100 Years of Service have also not been included. For those interested in pursuing further research beyond what you find in this bibliography, on Saskatchewan and its history, or any other topic please consult our library catalogue found on our website at: http://www.legassembly.sk.ca/leglibrary/library/libvoyager.htm.

Accessing the Local History Collection

Because of space limitations in the Legislative Building, the Saskatchewan local history collection is stored off-site and is not available for browsing. To avoid disappointment, if you wish to consult one of our local history volumes please advise the Reference Desk in advance and the items you require will be retrieved for you. The reference desk phone number is (306) 787-2276 and our email address is reference@legassembly.sk.ca.

Acknowledgements

I gratefully acknowledge the efforts of the Legislative Library staff in helping to create this bibliography. It is a group effort that brings each publication purchased by the library to the shelf from the ordering and processing, to the cataloguing. In particular I would like thank Marian Powell, our Legislative Librarian, for her enthusiastic support of our Centennial Project. Thanks also to Gina Abel for helping to locate and order in the past year, a large number of local histories that were new to our collection. In most cases the ordering of local histories requires an extra effort as they are specialty items. I would also like to thank both Megan Saum for her careful check through all of the index entries to be sure we had matched the citations correctly and Kim Hagel for planning and arranging the printing and marketing of the book. Both did careful and excellent work.

Finally I want to express my thanks and appreciation for the diligent and enthusiastic work done on this project by Kim Heidebrecht and Liza Leutenegger. I know they spent countless hours downloading records, formatting material, and creating the community index. Everything was then cross-checked and re-checked, and checked again. Also a special thanks to Liza for designing our cover and for doing the document layout.

How to Use the Local History Bibliography

Index Section

The index section, found at the back of the book, is arranged in one alphabetic sequence by community name. As well as individual communities we have also included histories of rural municipalities (R.M.), schools, school districts, reserves or band histories, and church histories.

The following is an example of three items as listed in the index with their corresponding citation numbers from the body of the document. In this example all three records deal with the community of Arborfield, but they are also listed separately in the index for the rural municipality (R.M.) history and a school history. You will note that citation # 572 is only listed once as it is about the community itself.

Sample Index entries:

Name of Community, Church, Rural Municipality or School Division	Citation #
Arborfield	167, 341, 572
Arborfield (R.M.)	167
Arborfield High School	341

Bibliographic Records

This section is arranged alphabetically by book title. The records were taken from the Legislative Library catalogue and each entry includes the title, author (if available), applicable subject headings, publisher, publishing date and call number. The call number indicates where the book is located on the library shelf.
